Baby Llamas Arrive!

Lander Llama Company purchased their first breeding females in October of 1994. The boy llamas at 2024 Mortimore Lane were excited to see Pansy, Angel and Daffodil arrive last fall, particularly their stud Starburst! All of the elderly experienced ladies were pregnant and Pansy and Angel gave Lander Llama Company two more baby female crias in May of 95. Unfortunately, Daffodil aborted twins 8 months into her pregnancy! The vet reported it to be extremely rare, and a tribute to the mother to carry the twins as long as she did. Lander Llama Company welcomes Pingora, and Absaroka to their llama heard.

Cria Name(s) Request

It has been decided by L.L.C. that all of the baby crias born at 20424 Mortimore Lane will be named after geographic places, ranges, flowers & plants, trees, and lakes or rivers from the Wind River, Absaroka, or Red Desert country. Hence the names, Pingora & Absaroka (Abbey)! Can you think of any? Here are the rules: The first letter of the name must begin with the first letter of the mother's name. Living examples: Pingora from her mother Pansy and Abbey from her mother Angel, both females. We know the letters this upcoming year will be A, D, and P (Angel, Daffodil, and Pansy), but we do not know if the crias will be boys or girls! So if you can think of any unique names that fit a boy or girl llama with the above rules, send us your list! The chosen names will be announced in the Spring / Summer Issue 3 of Llamers. If L.L.C. chooses your suggested name you will win a L.L.C. t-shirt. Ready.....start thinking!

Lander Llama Company participant, cartoonist, and friend, Kevin McVey of Ho Ho Kus, New Jersey wrote:

" I ran across this poem by Greg Keeler in a book of western poems my wife bought for me in California. The title is 'Maverick Western Verse' I thought it might be an interesting piece for the next Llameros. The copy is on the page attached- Had a great time with you out there. Thanks for a wonderful trip and I hope I can do it again sometime....."

The best to you and your pretty cookiemaker.....

-Llamas in the Landscape - a poem by Greg Keeler

And what are these spattering calico
over this valley of the horseshoe hills
At the true west confluence of the Missouri headwaters?
These big cuties-
Some kind of cross between an ostrich
and a pet-shop bunny-
have come of age tiptoeing among the mares and geldings.
So take that saddle
off ol' Buck,
and throw a pack or two
on sweetie and foofoo.

The range has never been so homey as
under these dainty puffballs,
ears straight up
and nose sniffing
thin air.
And sorry ol' Paint,
but your hooves,
your flatiron clodhoppers
are too fat and careless for what's left of the trail.
Yes bring on Phoebe.

Pet dogs attack llama

A pair of uncontrolled dogs with human handlers started running after the leased llama Cream Soda while he was minding his own cud in the Popo Agie Wilderness on September 9th, 1995.

The canine delinquents continued the harassment until Cream Soda pulled his stake! According to customers Jeff Horenstein and Ann Stockley the dogs chased the llama, lead and all, for 5 miles until Jeff finally caught up with the tired llama standing with other leased llamas from another party. The dogs apparently gave up and went back to their human handlers.

Jeff said the human handlers of the dogs thought it was rather cute and told him "I guess you didn't have the llama staked out tight enough!" Jeff said he lost a whole day of vacationing and he really wanted to send the canine cuties to doggie heaven , or in this case, doggie hell.

EDITORS NOTE: Dogs in general have become an increasing issue of controversy for wilderness managers. Most people believe their dogs are completely controllable, when in fact, it is like taking the kids to Disney World where they loose all common sense and obedience. "Ruff...Ruff lets chase something!!!". Please keep your dogs under control, or better yet, leave them at home.
